Voice of the Evangelist

Bruce Sechrest developed his musical interest over 65 years ago in High Point, North Carolina where he was born and raised. He grew up in a Christian household where his father had been a Baptist minister pastor for over 50 years which led to his influence into music evangelism. Early on, Bruce joined both the high school chorus and the band to help advance his training in basic music composition and choral direction which eventually led to the production of his first vinyl music project in 1976.

From 1980-2000, Sechrest devoted his passion to the gospel music ministry by teaching and directing for church choirs and evangelical concerts, which would serve as the foundation to his modern day evangelical music almost 20 years later.

Voice of the Evangelist

In 2015, years after a multi-year hiatus, he returns to North Carolina to the studio, to take on modern Christian music evangelism with new engineering and a contemporary sound produced by Crossroads Music in Arden, North Carolina. In addition, he founded the nonprofit music publishing company, Fairhavens Well, to house his publishing efforts and allow others to come alongside and participate in his evangelical effort. This non-profit publishing company was established and named after his fathers church, which was struck by lightning and burned to the ground, leaving only the wellhead showing where it used to stand. Using the concept of water, he plans to publish music to promote his musical and evangelical message. This return to music has sparked a newfound passion under his legacy to music. He simply wants to create Christian music with four goals; movement, memories, message, and evangelism.

Sechrest's legacy in the Christian community has not gone unnoticed. Bruce travels with his wife Marilyn and does concert dates on a regular basis in a multi-state area. They support and are members of Friendly Baptist Church in High Point North Carolina.

Bruce is a full time music evangelist who currently travels a 500 mile radius of Nashville, Tennessee USA, and has global exposure on internet radio, podcasts, and social media.

Message From Billy Graham

"I know of no higher calling than that of the itinerant evangelist.

To be used of God to call men and women to repentance and faith in Christ is surely one of life's greatest privileges. But evangelists also have a responsibility to work side by side with pastors and churches in reaching the lost and bringing them into the fellowship of God's people. No organization has sought to link the ministry of the evangelist and the pastor more than the Conference of Southern Baptist Evangelists, and I encourage you to prayerfully consider using a member of COSBE in your church and community.

The need for evangelism and revival is as pressing as ever - and so are the opportunities. May God bless you as you seek to fulfill God's call in your life and ministry."

Why Use a Traveling Music Evangelist?

In Ephesians 4:16 we read, "From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." In the same chapter in which Paul introduces the gifts of the Spirit for the edifying of the Body of Christ, he also established the necessity for each gift to be exercised to its fullest potential for the up-building of the Kingdom of God.

Remember that those who are truly called to a ministry should be used to their fullest potential by the Church for the glory of God. While music talent is important, the calling of God to do music should be the basis of true music evangelism. It is also important to realize that though there are many good and faithful musicians who are gifted in the presentation of Christian music in a church setting, there are those who have a special anointing for music evangelism.

In addition to music presentation, it is important to also have God's favor. Talent and style alone is not a substitute for God's anointing when delivering God's message to the church.

The music evangelist can provide a mountain top experience for the church that will make a difference in those who are moved by presenting the Gospel message through music.

According to the scripture just cited, the Body of Christ will be its healthiest when each part or joint contributes that gift with which it is uniquely equipped.

This can only be accomplished when church leaders and pastors recognize and utilize one of its greatest resources, the Vocational Music Evangelist.

Music is in this

When you go to the website of Bruce Sechrest www.fairhavenswell.com you will find four of my latest music projects. They are all constructed to have a blended presentation of old school, contemporary, americana, hymn sing along, as well as never before heard songs that tell the story of Jesus. This music is never sold to anyone in a concert setting and is offered for free to anyone who wishes to have it. We provide this as a ministry and are supported by financial gifts from concert goers as the Lord leads.

From the Beginning

I have never felt that I was a good singer but I have felt that if I just did as God equipped me, he would take care of what I lacked. I have always sought God's favor...I was saved in 1955 at 5 years old in an old country church in High Point North Carolina. I am still a member of that church today and as I grew up I found out that through music I can tell people stories of how they should put their trust in Jesus.

The music makes it easy to brush them in that direction. So, as a music evangelist, I view myself as a seed planter using music. In music it's important to know that there are two sides to music these days. One is industry and the other is ministry. The two can help each other, but the basis for Christian music must be ministry first.

My point is that I don't want people pointed to me but to the One who has sent me to tell others about Him. It's my desire for God to take what little I have and use it for Himself. This may sound funny but even in my imperfections I've wanted Him to use it to point the way to go or not. I have walked through this world, sometimes muddy outside, but clean inside because of what He has done for me. I feel like there are others who feel the same way about ministry and so being an encouragement and a blessing is important to me.

Being famous is not a goal, however being known is important in doing what God has called me to do. So here are my words to you the reader: I love the Lord and walk in and by faith. I am older now and I know less than I have ever learned. I do know that God wants to get your attention and He cares for you. If you will just put your trust in Him, He will see you through whatever may be happening. There is a red thread that comes from creation. It winds its way through the eons of time, touching and weaving as it goes. You, my friend, are part of its story. I hope you will and can sing with me. I love to tell the story of Jesus and his love, twill be my theme in Glory, to tell the old, old story, of Jesus and his love.
